The presentation style is not important. What is important are the objectives of an informative blog post. The objective of this specific example is to list websites where one can learn new skills or improve their career prospects. It's also an opportunity to make a pitch for the product you are trying to market - this website in this case, but it could be any number of things because it's all about giving value first and foremost. 2. Create a list of phrases that you would like to use throughout your blog post. These are NOT keywords, but phrases that will be used to describe your product or service. For example, the phrase "work-at-home parent" is not a keyword, but it is a handy phrase you can use every once in a while. 3. The third step involves gathering all of the words and phrases you want to use and arranging them by importance and importance order (the order they should appear in your blog post). This will help you create the most concise sentence possible every time. In this case, our list of phrases is as follows:

4. Create a list of keywords that you will be targeting with this particular blog post. These are the core terms that people might search for to find your product or service. Be sure to include any primary terms, secondary terms and long-tail phrases. Now, take all of those words and arrange them by importance order (how often they appear on your list of phrases) and list them out according to the following example:

5. Now that you have two lists - one for phrases and one for keywords - it's time to marry them together. Take each keyword and plug it into your sentences along with the appropriate phrase(s). For example, if you are targeting the keyword "work-at-home parent" you might have the following sentence: 6. Finally, rewrite your sentences to use proper grammar with your phrases and keywords. Keep in mind that these are NOT keywords, but just words that describe your product or service. Then combine all of your sentences into a paragraph and voila! You've got yourself a marketing paragraph for an informational blog post. I use this same approach with my product descriptions to ensure they are optimized for search engines. Also, when writing blogs posts about my websites or content services I take advantage of this technique to include optimized code when I'm publishing the blog itself on online directories like Squidoo or Hubpages. 7. To answer the main question, "How do you write an informative blog post?" you should be able to see that this is an example of several different steps. It's important to take the time to review these steps because there are other opportunities like this throughout your blogging career. You will likely encounter more than one opportunity like this at any given time, so it's best to familiarize yourself with it now rather than later. 8. If you're struggling with how to write an informative blog post, you might need a little help from a higher power. You can always try adhering to basic blog guidelines such as the following:
